
Kevin Young serves as poetry editor for The New Yorker and director of the Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture at the New York Public Library. From James Brown to John Brown’s raid to Brown v. the Topeka Board of Education, Young’s new poetry collection, Brown, is a meditation on the themes of collective experience and color.

Greedy Reads will have copies of the authors’ books for sale at a book signing following the program.

Presented in partnership with the CityLit Project.

Wednesday, April 25
7 p.m.

Writers Live programs are supported in part by The Miss Howard Hubbard Adult Programming Fund.
